At One Fell Swoop deals with a stone carver and his metamorphic wander through rural Ireland.

In passing he slips

through the film's frames into a re-imagining of his surroundings in which he finds himself trapped on an intense cataclastic path towards a

dead

end.

Photographed on expired 16mm black and white film and entirely hand-processed, At One Fell Swoop resembles a phantom-like film lodged amid multiple stratum of time and space.
